Residential Treatment helps troubled teens

Farmington Children`s Home cares for young men and women between the ages of 12 and 18 years. Children live in residential homes, designed to effectively serve their needs. Alternative care is available for Level 4 children, those with more intensive needs. Spacious lawns give children room to play games, plant gardens, roam and explore. Through their shared activities and guided development, children who have been neglected and abused find new meaning for the word "home."

Phased-care at Farmington Children's Home happens through the use of multiple cottages with levels of responsibility and security.
